

Colin Chartres of the International Water Management Institute has proposed local water solutions as a way of protecting farmers whilst conserving water

Colin Chartres of the International Water Management Institute has proposed local water solutions as a way of protecting farmers whilst conserving water

Global Water Management

Download the Free White Paper. Articles - Water Resource Solutions
www.WEFInternational.org

Previous Topic: Rising population could lead to forced vegetarianism by 2050

Visit our Facebook page now »

Leave a Comment

You must be logged in to post a comment.

Added: 28th August 2012
 Author: Emma Roscow
 Category:

Pages

- Archives
- Contact us
- Internship programmes
- Join us
- What//When//Why

Archives

» « ‹ ›

Latest articles

 Rising population could lead to forced vegetarianism by 2050
 Leading scientists have issued their firmest warnings yet that we need to cut back on meat-based supplies if we wish to [\[Read More\]](#)

 Cameron urged to act over Heathrow expansion
 Senior Conservative MP Tom Yeo has publicly appealed to David Cameron to abandon his opposition to a third runway at [\[Read More\]](#)

 US tropical storm follows track of Katrina as thousands evacuate the coast
 Tropical storm Isaac is heading towards the Gulf Coast of the United States having already killed 21 people – two in [\[Read More\]](#)

 Kate Tempest at the Old Vic Theatre
 “Why is it?”, asks poet and playwright Kate Tempest, “that slam poetry and hip-hop receive such a [\[Read More\]](#)

 Letter is latest step in Scottish Catholic Church's campaign against gay marriage
 A letter was read out in all 500 Scottish Catholic